

SEC. 5. The owner of the premises upon which such sign is erected, or the lessee of such premises having control of such sign may, within ten days after the removal of such sign is ordered, appeal to the court of common pleas in the county wherein such sign is located, or if there be no court of common pleas then to the superior court of the county, or to the judge thereof if said court be not in session, and in such appeal may allege that such sign does not constitute such a hazard to traffic, and ask that the superintendent of state police be restrained from ordering the removal of such sign. The appellant shall file, with such appeal, a bond, with sufficient surety, in the amount of one hundred dollars to prosecute such appeal to effect, and such appeal shall be privileged as to assignment of hearing. If said court or judge shall find that such sign does not constitute such a hazard to traffic he shall issue an order to the superintendent of state police restraining him from ordering the removal of such sign, and if such court or judge shall find that such sign constitutes such a hazard, such appeal shall be dismissed and an order of removal of such sign shall be issued.
