9:30 O'CLOCK P. M.

On arrival of the Royal Parade at the Grand Palace, the Court, led by Her Majesty and Ponce de Leon, will enter the ball room from the central stairs for the grand march. Immediately following the Court, all persons present in costume will take place in the grand march.

When opposite the Queen's throne, Her Majesty, accompanied by Ponce de Leon, will turn out of the grand march and review the parade of her subjects. On signal, all in costume will begin dancing, and for the first three numbers only those in costume will be permitted on the floor.

Appropriate prizes have been arranged for those attending the Ball in costume. The judges will select the winners during the costume dancing, and the prizes will be presented by Ponce de Leon at the direction of the Queen.

Following the three costume dances the floor will be open to all present.

During the evening the Royal party will occupy the throne room when not participating in the dancing.
