Raceland-Houma-Thibodaux District

All this OST territory from the Mississippi state line westward to Morgan City is delta land of the ancient Mississippi river. In the Lafourche basin, which includes Raceland, Thibodaux and Houma, there are highlands and lowlands threaded with bayous. On the highlands these cities have been built, and around them is one of the noted sugar plantations of Louisiana.

There are many improved gravel roads, navigable bayous, with varied opportunities for drives, vacations, fishing, hunting and trips to the Gulf. Bayou Lafourche with 140 mi. of road on the two sides, mostly gravelled, is the most thickly settled rural road in America. Its homes range from clusters of old negro cabins to the stately plantation homes. Schools that are a tribute to these people are developing thruout the district.

Thibodaux is the old sugar plantation center. Houma is the country city with numerous bayous connecting to the Gulf. Raceland is the center for the outlying delta areas that are now being dyked and reclaimed by pumping by scientific farming, are yielding their riches in varied forms—Raceland's "Little Holland," 32,251 acres are under reclamation around Raceland. Notable projects are Delta Farms at Larose, Seely Estates at Cut Off, Smithport Farms at Lockport, Grant Smith & Company's tract west of Raceland. One of the three cities on the OST is at Raceland. A friendly people all thru this district.

Pop. 5160. Elevation 13 ft. Tourist Camp—None. Two country hotels. OST Conciliors, Calvin Wenzel and Julius Dupont.

This is still a part of the old Mississippi river delta section. Bayous reach from Houma to the Gulf like the spreading fingers of the hand, with gravelled drives and plantations along the banks and fishing boats on the waters. Houma is an important fish, shrimp and oyster packing and shipping center, and also trapping and furs. For sportsmen, deer hunting, water fowl, fishing and golf. South, at Dulac a recreation beach is developing. Natural gas. Fine schools. The OST along Bayou Black to Gibson is one of the prettiest drives in Louisiana.
